Former Woodhull Man Died Sunday at Home of His Son

John Kent Stewart Passed at Ripe Age of 92 Years—Born at Stewart's Corners and Spent Entire Life in Vicinity—Funeral Held Tuesday in Canisteo.

The death of John Kent Stewart, age 92, occurred Sunday at 2:45 A. M. at the home of his son, Ray F. Stewart in Canisteo, where he had made his home for the past few years.

Mr. Stewart was born May 10 1839, at Stewart's Corners, Pulteney Township, son of Joseph and Experience Kent Stewart.

His early life was spent with his parents on the farm. At the age of about twenty he came to Woodhull and lived with a sister, Mrs. Charlotte DeLong, on the old DeLong farm now owned by Leonard Grist. Later making his home with Eddy Smith and family. After leaving the home of his parents he taught school in the rural districts until his marriage to Emily Stratton Griswoll in 1867, who died several years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Stewart started housekeeping on the farm now owned and occupied by their daughter and husband. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Schoonover. He was actively engaged in farming until retiring several years ago and was also assessor of the town of Woodhull for a number of terms.

He expressed great satisfaction in having been privileged to cast his first ballot for Abraham Lincoln, in the fall following his twenty-first birthday.

During this same year he became affiliated with the Masonic Lodge of Woodhill, the first Lodge of that order which was organized in the town and served the Lodge as Worshipful Master. According to present records, Mr. Stewart was the oldest Mason in New York state. He was recently made an honorary member of the local lodge. He had always expressed a desire for the Masonic Lodge to have charge of the service at the grave but owning to the inability of the home lodge, the Masonic lodge of Canisteo kindly consented to take charge.

Mr. Stewart was also a member of the South Baptist church of Hornell and of the local Odd Fellows lodge.

About four years ago he began to lose his eye sight and for over a year had been totally blind but never a word of complaint was heard about his affliction; always thinking of others' happiness first.

Mr. Stewart was always a kind neighbor, friend and father, having won for himself a host of friends whose companionship he enjoyed.

Death came to Mr. Stewart much as he had always wished it might in that the end might come during sleep and also during the blooming of roses.

The deceased is survived by one son, Ray of Canisteo, with whom he made his home, two daughters, Mrs. Laura Doane of Hornell and Mrs. Vera Schoonover of Woodhull; also five grandsons, one granddaughter and one nephew, Russell DeLong of Borden.

Funeral services were held from the home, Tuesday at 2:30 P. M., with the Rev. Carl Daykins, pastor of the First Baptist church of Canisteo, officiating. Burial was made in Woodhull cemetery. The bearers were Fred Crane, Claud Westbrook, George Whiting, Frank Kettle and Frank Page of Canisteo and Earle Brown of Woodhull.

Those attending the burial here were; Mr. and Mrs. Ray F. Stewart, daughter Onolee; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Kline, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Brotzman, Mrs. Hugh Slawson, Mrs. Fred Williams, Mrs. Jennie Hurd, Mrs. George Whiting, Rev. Carl Dawkins of Canisteo; Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Doane, Hornell, Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Doane and Mr. Mrs. Raymond Doane, New York City; Charles Smith, Horseheads; Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Schoonover, Mr. and Mrs. Loren Schoonover, Mr. and Mrs. Bona Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Earle Brown and daughter, Doris; Walter A. Smith of this place; Mr. and Mrs. Russell DeLong of Borden; V. A. Manley of Addison and a large delegation of the Masonic order of Canisteo.

Every Bed Filled at Anderson Health Home

The Anderson Health Home located at South Canisteo opened on July 9th with every available bed occupied. Forty five children are there, while 30 more are on the waiting list. The selection of these children represents many hours of work done by Mrs. Standish and Miss Reynolds the two efficient county nurses and by many doctors throughout the County as every child has been examined by a physician and declared in need of Camp care, and also tested to prove each free from any communicable disease.

The Committee on Children's work of the County Tuberculosis Association Mrs. Margaret Standish, chairman has been very helpful and is planning to hold a meeting at the Home, Friday, July, 17 at 2:30 in order to observe the Home in working order. Dr. D. P. Mathewson, superintendent of the Pleasant Valley Sanatorium is expected to be present at this meeting.

Dr. W. W. McCall, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Hornell, conducted the service, Sunday, July 12. He was accompanied by his wife, Mrs. McCall and his two daughters. The Home is indebted to the First Presbyterian Sunday School of Hornell for song books loaned for the summer.

Rev. Carl Dawkins will be in charge of the afternoon service on Sunday, July 19 at 4 P. M. The public is invited.

The Home is constantly in need of vegetables, canned fruit, and jelly. The larger girls and boys need playsuits, coveralls, shirts, and shorts, or overalls, size 15. Cold nights find the camp without sufficient sheets and blankets for the extra beds.

Woodhull May Become Another "Wayne" Village

Is the village of Woodhull destined to be another "Wayne" with derricks sticking up out of every back-lot where there is room to stand one? This question holds paramount interest in the minds of Woodhull people as "straws" point to the starting of a second well inside the corporation limits within a few days.

According to the facts available, men have been busy leasing land in the village for the past several days andp romises have been made that the first test well will be located this week or next week. There is little doubt that gas is to be had at a shallow depth in the village, as evidenced by the many water wells that have turned out to be small gas producers. Gas men are of the opinion that the sand which has already given two good wells, the Husted and the Williams, is even better right under the village than at those wells. A local geologist points out his belief that the Van Ettan anticline passes through Woodhull at an angle which cuts directly under the post office. If this be true the presence of gas in large paying quantities is doubtless forecast by the superficial strikes that have already been made.

Wayne, although less than half the size of Woodhull, boasts of approximately 30 paying wells within its confines, to say nothing of another dozen now in the process of drilling. If drilling starts along like proportions the village of Woodhull may soon be bristling like a huge porcupine; churches may look forward to endowments in the shape of paying gas wells, and the village awake to a prosperity unknown even in the heyday of its early history when the primeval forests surrounding furnished a rich if impermanent harvest.

Dr. Barron Wants School Tax Off Real Estate

Supervisors Told Income and Other Kinds of Taxes Should Bear School Burden Instead of Real Estate Would Get Legislators' Support

Bath, July 10.—Addressing the Steuben County Board of Supervisors in Bath, Wednesday, on tax relief, Dr. W. E. Barron of Addison said in part:

"One of the most outstanding problems in the economic and social welfare of Steuben County is the seemingly unfair and unjust burden of taxes imposed upon real estate. This is admitted by all thinking taxpayers and relief is demanded. Relief is just around the corner, provided the people act now.

"Nominate and elect members of the State Legislature who are pledged to enact a law to lift the entire school tax from real estate and place it upon the income tax roll, if necessary, even extending the income tax law. Leave administration o school Indisturbed. It is admitted that such a plan is feasible and practical, no new machinery of government would be needed to make it effective.

"I believe it would do more to hasten better times, increase the selling value of real property, permit more boys and girls to attend college, and afford more men opportunity to own an extra suit of clothes or to pay their obligations. I urge that candidates for members of Assembly pledge to support such a measure or that other candidates be found who will so pledge."

Hedgesville Church Celebrates Centennial of Its Organization

Presbyterian Group Was Organized in Log Schoolhouse by the Rev. Flagler in 1831—Only Seventeen Members in First Congregation—Anniversary Services to be Conducted Sunday and Monday, July 19 and 20.

One hundred years ago a little body of people embracing the Presbyterian faith, established the first church of that denomination in the township of Woodhull. The church lived, and next Sunday and Monday centennial services will be conducted in honor of the event at the Hedgesville Presby. church which now stands a few rods from the old log school house in which the organization was formed. It is indeed fitting that descendants of some of the founders of that struggling little wilderness church, will be present to see the simple anniversary services that will crown its century of usefulness.

HEDGESVILLE CHURCH

Worcester Perry was the first settler at what later became known as the village of Hedgesville. Building and hewing a road out of the wilderness, Worcester Perry led his ox team over the rough hills to a sheltered spot that took his fancy, and there his restless axe slashed a clearing and formed a log house. Only two other habitations then stood between his humble dwelling and the town of Cameron.

It was at the school house near Worcester Perry's log cabin that the Rev. Isaac Flagler of Hammondsport organized the early church, October 15, 1831, adopting the Confession of Faith and Covenant of the Bath Presbytery. The original members were Mr. and Mrs. Allen Sheldon, Franklin B. Hubbard, Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Hubbard, Mr. and Mrs. Obed Hathaway, Catherine Pomeroy, Martin Whiteman, Hannah Gulick, Dorotha Whiteman, Thomas Hedges, Mary Shumway, Hannah Smith, Elizabeth Stroud and Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Morrell. Allen Sheldon and C. P. Hubbard were chosen the first elders and F. B. Hubbard clerk.

The first pastor was the Rev. Warren Day, who was succeeded the first year by a Rev. Pomeroy whose first name is missing. The Rev. Rockwell White served the little wilderness church in 1832, and the Rev. Orrin Johnson for 1833-34.

In 1861 the Presbyterian congregation united with those of the Methodist faith in the community, in building the present edifice which stands on the knoll overlooking Tuscarora Creek. For many years the building was used on alternate Sundays by the two churches, but recently there has been no Methodist pastor, the earliest unit having survived. Among the pastors who have served the congregation during the past thirty years have been the Rev's. Crawford, McCallum, Hull, Sangree and Francis. The present pastor is the Rev. E. Trevor Cook, who like many of his predecessors, serves the Pastorate at Hedgesville together with that at Jasper.

Many well known people throughout Steuben Presbytery will be at the centenial services Sunday afternoon and Monday evening.

Decision Rendered in Much Talked Case

An appeal from a referee's decision handed down Saturday was taken Monday by defendants in the civil action of Clarence and Mildred Martin vs. Charles and Catherine Hunt, Nina Sprague Miller and Attorney James O. Sebring.

The decision, given by Referee John B. M. Stephens, followed an effort on behalf of the plaintiffs to recover on a mortgage held against property purchased by the Hunts from the Martins and later replevined by Mrs. Miller.

In August, 1927, Mr. and Mrs. Hunt purchased a farm from Mr. and Mrs. Martin, who retained a chattel mortgage on the property which is in the town of Rathbone.

Some time later Mrs. Miller entered the picture through a judgment given her in the sum of $457-.02 against Mr. and Mrs. Hunt. She levied on the property on which Mr. and Mrs. Martin still held the mortgage. In December, 1929, the property was offered at a sheriff's sale to satisfy the judgment held by Mrs. Miller. Only one bidder acted on behalf of Mrs. Miller and the entire property was sold for $450.

Clarence Martin was present at the sale and read his chattel mortgage on the property which forbade any sale. Immediately after the sale property was removed from the premises. At this time the Martins brought an action to recover and prepared a requisition. Some of the property was returned to the sheriff while some was kept by Mrs. Miller. The Martins sought to recover all the property.

The decision dismissed the complaint against Mr. and Mrs. Hunt but ordered Mr. Sebring and Mrs. Miller to return all property taken from the Hunt farm or pay its value to the Hunts. This value was fixed at $2,850. Mr. Sebring announced that an appeal from that decision was taken to the Appellate Division, Monday.

Clarence Sutton, pastor of the Bath Methodist church. Miss Agnes Simons and Donald Grange were the attendants.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS A CHURCH

One hundred years ago a little group of people near what has since been known as the village of Hedgesville, decided to form an organization for worship. They wisely thought that in union lies strength, so allied themselves to one of the foremost protestant organizations, the Presbyterian Church. The first meeting was held near the original homestead of Worcester Perry.

There were only seventeen members in the little church that so bravely faced the world that day so long ago, yet the fervor for worship has not died as generation has succeeded generation springing up in the hills that surround the little hamlet. To the pioneer, religion has been a very mark of progress; as much a part of his toilsome struggle for existence as the plow that stirred the virgin soil, or the hands that guided the plow. Almost without exception the lasting success of any pioneer effort can be measured by the faith its members reposed in their Creator.

One stops to wonder sometimes how these original settlers as a whole survived the life of carving a living out of the wilderness. The ceaseless toil for both man and wife as they cut and hewed the primeval trees to form a rude shelter; as they cleared land, burned brush, grubbed out roots and laboriously prepared a seedbed for the first sowings. On top of her labors beside her rugged husband, the pioneer woman must needs strive long into the night by light of a flickering candle attaining the rude counterpart of the things her descendant today gets by tossing a few coins upon the counter; carding the wool and spinning the yard for winter garments, pounding the flax and weaving the harsh but serviceable homespun that clothed her family. The endless cooking by crude means when every article of food must necessarily be prepared by her hands; the ceaseless caring for large families of children, nursing to health or watching unaided the soul of her off-spring depart into the great Beyond, when doctors were far out of call.

The loneliness, alone, might have driven a less determined people to distraction. One hundred years ago the necessities of our favored day were the undreamed inventions of the future, the scythe and cradle were the only harvesting implements as a young farmer in Virginia was building the first reaper. Rest from stupenduous nerve and muscle racking toil was sought upon a hard bunk with blankets spread for the only springs and mattress. Wild animals enlivened the vigils of the nights with their prowling noises, as they sought to steal from the poor pioneer a much need chicken, lamb or shoat.

Only the fit could survive. Yet it took more than fitness of body to endure those hardships; it took a firmness of purpose that was engendered by an unquestioned faith in God. The faith that enabled those pioneers to set up their altar in the wilderness, has been sufficient to endure for one hundred years. It shall continue to live, for it is the same religion, the same God and descendants of those self-same pioneers are today still holding aloft the torch of faith which has slipped from nerveless fingers from generation to generation.

WHY BACK TO NORMAL?

Almost every article, speech and even conversation sooner or later seems to get around to some such expression as "When things get back to normal, such and such should happen."

What is this thing called "normal?" And how do we know when it existed and when we may expect to reach it again?

Average, yes, we can figure the averages over the five years '24 to '29, or any other arbitrary period, or we can take "pre-war" as a basis for discussion—but what good does that do now? And what harm?

Would it be sane to call '28 or '29 normal? Manifestly not. Or '30-'31? God forbid! Well, if these are abnormal or subnormal, what license is there to take any period of years and call them by this meaningless name of normal?

Isn't it just barely possible that every year, every period, yes, every month is normal for that particular time and condition of the public mind?

From '23 to '29 the normal state of mind of Americans and most of the world was to believe that tomorrow would be better than today and consequently to discount the future—to plan new things to do—new enterprises—greater expansion—wider markets. Now the public mind is scared stiff. Then, we spent a dollar with faith we'd have another and maybe two, tomorrow. Now we hang on to nickels for fear they'll become pennies.

But why isn't this condition normal? Europeans, particularly the Scotch and French, have had to practice frugality for years. How do we know America has not reached the stage of development where prodigal spending is a thing of the past?

We cut down our forests—and spent them. We opened new land—and spent it. We found gold, silver, iron and oil—and spent them. We developed new industries to take up the saving in man power by machines—and spent and spent and spent.

Better farming—jobs in the mills. Better machines—jobs in automobile factories. Straight line production—jobs as garage men, chauffeurs. Radio absorbed its share of man power.

But what next? Hasn't man power to be absorbed back into existing industries?

So why not think of the present situation as normal? Why not stir the public mind to ambitious projects within existing industries? Why shouldn't more men find the courage to go into business for themselves, promote for all they're worth, take men in with them?

Have men stopped thinking about what they'd like to do? Is ambition dead in this country of ours? Can't we take ordinary business risks any more? Haven't we any "guts"?

Of course, the future is a certain difficult to penetrate. But progress lies in desire to penetrate it—individual courage to brave hazards—fight for rewards.

Normal? Today is normal for today. Tomorrow may just as well be abnormal compared with today. It will not be better unless every man back of us WANTS to make it better, TRIES to do more and has FAITH and COURAGE of his desires.

A STATESMANLIKE MOVE

In calling in the leaders of both the major political parties and getting their approval beforehand, President Hoover acted in a statesmanlike way in putting forward his proposal for a one year suspension of payment of principal and interest on war debts.

It seems to be the belief of the men who know most about such things that this will bring about an immediate improvement in business conditions all over the world. President Hoover's justification is, of course, that it will benefit the United States of America. We are not in the business of doing things because they will benefit some other country unless we get a corresponding benefit. But when men like Owen D. Young, the famous Democrat whose name is attached to the Young plan for German reparations, such men of big affairs as Charles G. Dawes and Andrew Mellon on the Republican side, and statesmen on the order of Newton Baker and Carter Glass on the Democratic side, all agree that to ease up the economic pressure on Germany will result in improved business in America, we, naturally, have to agree with them. They know a great deal more about it than we do.

We do not understand that anyone expects an instantaneous return, or a return in a single year, to the high point of prosperity which we reached in 1928. But already the financial and business world is demonstrating its confidence that the upswing has begun, and the outlook for the coming year seems distinctly brighter than it did a month ago.

After all, it is only good business to give a debtor easy terms if he cannot meet the terms agreed on. That is true as between nations, as it is between individuals. Everybody who owes more money than he can immediately pay has found his creditors generally willing to take what he could give them, rather than to apply undue pressure. It is only fair to Germany to give that Republic the same kind of a chance to catch up that private business interests grant to their customers who may be in difficulties.

VACATIONING IN THE NORTH

It is possible to quote no less an authority than ex-President Coolidge in advising that every person take a vacation during the summer months. "The brains of the country need relaxation and refreshment", says Mr. Coolidge, and he is going to get his own play day by laying off on writing daily syndicate letters, and by doing the unusual—which is the basis for a vacation.

Does anybody really believe that the depression would not have come, that the United States would have escaped what has hit every other country in the world, if the Democrats had won in 1928? And does anybody honestly believe that Al. Smith in the White House would have done more to lessen the severity of the disaster or to bring it to an early end than Herbert Hoover has done?

POST AND GATTY

Washington officials headed by President Hoover have joined in paying honor to Wiley Post and Harold Gatty, who circled the rim of the world in eight and one-half days. They showed how distance in travel could be annihilated.

While they were making their epochal trip the diplomatic relations of the World were being carried on by telephone conversations between the White House at Washington and our representatives in Paris. This method also clipped off time. In olden days diplomacy was carred on by letter writing and slow mails.

City Fright

Everybody who visits New York is seized at some time or other with a sense of panic at its immensity, no matter how well travel seasoned they have become. Practically every noted foreigner, from Dr. Albert Einstein to the youngest British flapper, yields at some time or other to this feeling.

People in country towns who may have kept away from the city because of their innate fear of the town ought to conquer this feeling and spend some time here. It is more than a liberal education.

No Real Danger

Life here is as safe as in any spot on earth, in spite of the monsters that roar in the subways, clatter on the elevated railroads and screech on the streets. That noise is what saves lives, probably. At the same time it is nerve-shaking to the stranger, from its potential menace.

Being lost in this enormous city is no great shakes. All one has to do is step up to some one of its 19,000 policemen and let him straighten out your mental tangle. Years ago they earned the name of "The Finest" and there is no reason to think of them as otherwise, even in these days of newspaper exposes.

Auto Tourists

Hardly an hour passes, day or night, that one cannot see an automobile carrying a load of farm folks out to see the sights of a great city, bowling along through the heart of Longacre Square—the focus of all this country's theatrical activities. Nothing is missing on most of these autos; the tent strapped on the running board; camp paraphernalia piled in, rusty old baggage, and dad up front in his shirt sleeves calmly moseying along past the friendly traffic cops; and mother in calico getting an eyeful while soothing her unruly brood.

Everybody they stop to ask for directions takes pleasure in helping them along and, even if they don't stay long in the city but hike right out to some tourist camp, they get to see the greatest show on earth at a minimum of expense and effort. It's a good stunt for anybody in the country who is wondering where to go for a vacation.

The Way of Life

By BRUCE BARTON

What Does It Matter?

LAST summer there was a water shortage in a town where I was visiting.

I happened to be chatting with my host, who is a noted man, while he was shaving, and I noticed how careful he was to use very little water.

"It seems sort of silly for you to be so conscientious," I remarked. "After all, the few drops that you conserve won't make any difference."

"They don't make any difference in the final result," he said, "but they make a lot of difference to me."

When he saw from my expression that I did not quite get his meaning, he proceeded to give me his philosophy of life.

He said that when he graduated from college, a quarter of a century ago, there was a great deal of popular emphasis upon so-called "social service."

Science had begun to introduce wonderful new inventions for increasing human happiness. Men were stirred by the hope of a quick millennium. Young people graduated with the notion that a few years of earnest effort would transform the world.

My friend was one of the most eager of the reformers. He organized, and voted, and agitated, and did all the things that he should. But nothing happened. The good candidates for whom he cast his vote were defeated. The good causes made slow progress. Human nature showed a discouraging unwillingness to change.

"I went through a period of deep disillusionment," he said. "I thought to myself, what's the use of doing anything when one's single effort seems so futile?

"One day while I was in this mood I discovered these words of Socrates:

'I, therefore, . . . consider how I may exhibit my soul before the judge in a healthy condition. Wherefore, disregarding the honors that most men value, and looking to the truth, I shall endeavor in reality to live as virtuously as I can; and when I die, to die so. And I invite all other men, to the utmost of my power; . . . to this contest, which, I affirm, surpasses all contests here.'

"That flashed across my mind like a bolt of lightning," my friend continued. "It clarified everything.

"I realized that I am not responsible for the success or failure of any good cause. All I am responsible for is my own best effort in that cause. Whether my vote be effective or not; whether the amount of water I can save will make any difference—these are not the questions.

"The only question is: Am I doing my best?

"That discovery gave me great comfort," he concluded. "Maybe you could use it in one of your editorials?"

"Many thanks," I answered. "I can."

SOCIAL SERVICE IN THE EARLY CHURCH

Acts 4:32-35; 6:1-4; II Corinthians 9:1-7
Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D.

Christianity is far more than an ideal. Its principles can be put into practice. Calvin Coolidge recently said in one of his daily messages: "It would be difficult to find anywhere on earth a human being whose life has not been modified in some degree by the influence of the Christian religion." Thought of others rather than of self is basic. This began with the Founder and every true follower has the same idea.

Today the world still needs the fullest expression of Christian socialism. As people had need in the Jerusalem congregation, provision was made by turning into a common fund whatever could be spared. Many quarrels resulted over the distribution of money. When the apostles faced the situation they realized that their work of preaching was so great that they could not also give adequate attention to the physical needs of the growing Christian community. Then the office of deacon was inaugurated and seven were chosen to undertake this special type of service. This office of deacon persists in the church of today and a long line of men and women have thus very honorably served the Lord in helping the poor.

Later the gathering of the poor fund was an extensive enterprise. The Council of Jerusalem decreed that Paul, and the other apostles to the nations, should seek funds for the poor in Jerusalem when they ministered abroad. The church in Corinth was held up as an example to the friends in Macedonia quite as we are urged today to measure up to the gift made by another. Thus what are called modern financial pressure methods in raising money seem to be rather old.

TODAY AND TOMORROW

By FRANK PARKER STOCKBRIDGE

MIGRATION

There is a "back-to-the-land" movement actively in progress in the East. Within the past three months sixteen farms within five miles of my own have been sold to people who have been working in the factories in the industrial cities of Massachusetts.

I talked with one of these newcomers the other day: "I'm an electrician," he said. "When times are good I have a job in an electrical equipment factory. When times are bad I'm out of a job. We have been saving, my wife and I, to buy a house in town. Then we began to consider what good a town house would be to us if I didn't have a job. On the farm we can at least feed ourselves and our three children, and we're near enough to town so that when things pick up I can go back to my job and come home every night. I'm not a farmer, but my wife is country bred and I'm not afraid of work."

We are going to hear more of this sort of thing. In the old days the "landless man" was regarded as a social outcast. The only really independent man today is the one who can get his own living in a pinch, from his own land.

HOUSES

I saw the beginning of a revolution the other day in Wilmington, Delaware. It is a house, a small, one-family house, the frame of which is made of pressed steel shapes. Two young men put the frame of the house together with bolts in a couple of days' time. It was as easy as a boy playing with one of the popular structural toys.

These amateur builders are using only materials which call for no skilled labor in completing their house. Factory-made roofing, siding, insulating material, wall-board and flooring will give them, they say, a more substantial house than most, and at much lower cost than a house built in the usual manner.

I heard of other experiments in factory-built homes. Engineers, architects and manufacturers are about ready to offer better homes at less money.

WORK

The five-day week for factory workers is already established in many large industries and in some of the building trades. It will not be long before nobody works on Saturday.

The eight-hour working day, for which the labor unions fought for so many years, seems about to be shortened. The Kellogg Company of Battle Creek is the first large concern to try the six-hour day. The factory runs twelve hours, in two shifts. There is no time out for meals. The company reports that even with an increase of one-eighth in the basic wage rate the overhead and operating cost per unit of production is lower than under the eight-hour plan.

Watch for the shortening of the working day by other industries.

SHOES

Shoes are cheaper than ever before, and the tendency is still downward.

At the same time, a fashionable Fifth Avenue custom shoemaker has recently raised his minimum price for a pair of ladies' shoes from $75 to $100 a pair!

The latest thing to make shoes cheaper is the glued-on sole. A new adhesive, developed in the DuPont laboratories and now in use by some 70-odd shoe factories, fastens the sole to the upper without the use of tacks, pegs or stitches. It is said to be waterproof, flexible and permanent.

There will always be a few people who will pay fancy prices for handmade goods, but the big money is made by those who find a better way to make things cheaper.

FISH

Fish ought to be the cheapest of all foods, instead of being one of the most expensive, as it is in all large cities and in towns away from the commercial fisheries. It is one food crop which requires no planting or cultivation.

The reason for the high cost is the perishable nature of fish and the expense of keeping it iced. Experiments with the quick freezing of fish by carbon dioxide snow or "dry ice" indicate that the flavor can be preserved and deterioration prevented n a way which makes the cost of handling and shipping much lower than previously.

Before long fresh fish of the most popular food varieties will be available everywhere at a cost to compete with meat. But no fish ever bought in a market tastes half so good as the ones you catch yourself!

Many Locally Known People in Tri-State Gas & Oil Corporation

Coupled with the announcement of Congressman Gale H. Stalker that the Tri-State Oil and Gas Corporation of which he is the head had accumulated additional acreage and gas production in the Wayne natural gas field, is a complete resume of Tri-State activities.

The TriState Company was formed in April of this year with Mr. Stalker as president; Mordecai Casson, Jr., of Elmira, counsellor at law and president of the Ambassador Oil Corporation and treasurer of the Amboco Corporation as vice president; D. F. Smith of Elmira, Wholesale Coal as secretary H. W. Cloos of Painted Post, cashier of the Painted Post National Bank as treasurer. Directors include the above named officers and the following: Guy W. Cheney of Corning, District Attorney of Steuben County; John F. Dale of Elmira, former sheriff of Chemung County and President of the J. D. Oil Company; A. J. Berns of Painted Post, vice-president of the Painted Post National Bank; C. H. Calkins of Elmira, president of Ter-Cal Company; James W. Pennock, Jr., of Syracuse, retired capitalist.

Mr. Stalker recently announced the completion of the deal which terminated litigation on between Tri-State and the Wittmer gas interests of Pittsburgh. Through a deal with the Bigelow Gas Corporation of Rochester the TriState accumulates with undivided half interest 7,000 acres of land in and about Wayne and three producing wells, with a registered open flow of more than 20,000,000 cubic feet daily.

"The agreement," Mr. Stalker, said, "was made just a few days ago and just as soon as the wheels of legal machinery can be put into motion, the litigation between the two companies will be definitely terminated."

He added, "The Wittmer holdings include three producing wells, the Olesezwski No. 1, George Earnest No. 1 and Dencenberg No. 1." At present the Wittmer Company is drilling the Olesezwski No. 2.

Driling will be done jointly by Tri-State and Bigelow. Mr. Stalker states that the transaction is by no means a consolidation between the two organizations but meant a combination of resources.

The companies plan extensive drilling operations in the Wayne field. Tri-State will soon add two more crews to its field force making a total of four for the field and with this plan, four wells are expected to be drilled at once, bringing in one a week.

This is the fastest schedule adopted by any one organization since gas was first discovered in the Wayne district several months ago. The transaction itself is one of the largest in this vicinity and attracted considerable interest and caused much comment when completed.

Prior to organizing the Tri-State Corporation its present officers had secured several thousand acres of land in the district named and turned over their holdings to the company. Since then additional acreage has been leased bringing the total amount to more than 25,000 acres.

The company also added to its field force Lawrence P. Spencer, prominent geologist. Mr. Spencer was formerly employed with leading oil companies in the mid-continent fields. He is given a high place among the geologists in the field.

John F. Dale, a director of the company, is field manager for the concern. Mr. Dale is a former sheriff of Chemung County and has been active in oil and gas production for many years, the head of the J. D. Oil Company, owners of numerous producing wells in western New York.

Tri-Statae at present has two producing wells in the Village of Wayne, the first to be drilled in was in the rear of the Arrowhead Garage with an open flow of 3,500,000 cubic feet. The second was that on the Methodist Church property, immediately adjoining the church and which made 4,000,000 cubic feet.

The Norris farm location for Tri-State's No. 3 well has been spudded preparatory to drilling and work is progressing rapidly, Manager Dale reported today. Erwin Stone and his crew of drillers, are engaged in drilling operations on this location.

Tri-State stock was placed among people in the community at $10.00 per share, increased to $12.50, thence to $15.00 and stock has been selling at $20.00 per share since June 22nd. With the completion of the transaction involving additional production in the Wayne field and the drilling in of two successful wells the stock was increased to $30.00 on June 30th.

It is the contention of Mr. Stalker that the shares of Tri-State stock will materially enhance in value and those who have the foresight to visualize the potential possibilities of the natural gas industry will benefit during the growth of Tri-State which to date has been the most rapid of any company formed since the gas boom in this area.

Tri-State's principal offices are located in the Turner Building, Elmira and they also maintain field offices in Wayne, which is now termed a rig spotted village.

A community enterprise of this calibre, sponsored by men of high standing, is a boom and adds optimism to those in this period of depression.

The natural gas industry today is the only major force that has any life and is attracting investors from all parts of the country. Financiers from New York have placed men in the field to investigate conditions and these men are reporting back to their superiors that the field is the greatest in eastern United States.

Notice of increase of capital of Tri-State from $500,000 to $1,000,000 was filed recently with the Secretary of State at Albany.

The move, Congressman Stalker says, was made to enable the firm to develop its new acreage in the Wayne field obtained through purchase of the Wittmer interests.

"We are considering laying pipe lines, although routes and destinations have not yet been chosen, and we are also carrying on negotiations to buy out some of our competitors in the Wayne natural gas field," Mr. Stalker says in a statement.

This Week in Washington

BY RADFORD MOBLEY
AUTOCASTER WASHINGTON BUREAU

Washington, D. C., July 14—The weeks that have elapsed since President Hoover made his notable suggestion for a debt moratorium to the European governments have served only to strengthen his position. When a week later he backed it up by a suggestion to the Federal Farm Board that it withhold its surplus of wheat until the domestic price had gained a satisfactory level, he only added to his prestige.

In both moves he has done what the country has been demanding of him; assume active leadership. Mr. Hoover has never been accused of lacking force, but many observers had come to wonder whether his lifetime habit of proceeding as the head of a big business was not handicapping him as far as results were concerned. Acting as head of a concern staffed with politicians is far different from initiating the polices of a private business concern and his attempt to adapt his old methods is said by many here to have been the cause for many of his decisions that have aroused criticism.

Twice within a month he has broken through red tape, each time his action being met with such a storm of approval that it will undoubtedly hearten hm to similar actions. As Will Rogers, one of the the most astute of all commentators on public officials, says, the coming campaign is almost certain to be a contest between Hoover and Curtis, on one side, and Governor Roosevelt and some running mate on the other.

The strong tide that is setting in in favor of Vice President Curtis' renomination threatens to overturn one political precedent—that no vice president ever succeeds himself. In the 150 years of this government there has always been a different vice president every four years and Curtis, if he is re-elected, will hold a unique honor. His choice is by no means sure, as political trades for votes for the head of the ticket at next summer's convention may return him to his Kansas prairies.

John J. Raskob, the executive head of the Democratic Party who has just returned from a three months' trip to Europe, has nothing but praise for President Hoover's debt proposal, but declares it has nothing to do with the coming campaign, which will be fought on the old familiar lines of Prohibition and the tariff. What he does not say, however, is that the President has unquestionably won votes by his display of eminent statesmanship and his evident desire to give the country the leadership it had a right to expect from a man of his known ability.

Foreign newspapers frankly explain that the debt proposal means less in actual financial relief than in its psychological aspects. The first announcement resulted in a healthier tone in all business lines, including the big exchanges where the greatest sensitiveness is always shown to political moves. Stocks have kept climbing and both wholesale and retail business in this country and abroad, have shown marked improvement. Nobody expected an overnight return to the prosperity of 1928 so there is no feeling that the plan is merely a political gesture instead of a practical project for releasing the restrictions on capital, which all concede is the real cause of the present hard times, along with drought and overproduction.

The President's attitude towards helping out the South American republics in a financial way is another thing that is adding to his popularity. South America is a market that must always be fought for by this country, Europe being actually nearer to it in sailing time than New York, besides being closer in blood ties and culture. By initiating plans for financial help Mr. Hoover has made a strong bid for membership that should result in substantial gains in trade, observers assert. The importance of such markets is best shown by the recent good will trip of the Prince of Wales to all the leading countries of South America. The need of something to offset the effects of his visit has been met by the President, it is considered here by government advisers.

Sam McKelvie, who recently retired as a member of the Federal Farm Board, took occasion, on presenting his formal resignation to the President, to outline the work the Board has accomplished in the past year. He points out that the Government has "undertaken successfully to save the farmer from the immediate price debacle that has always followed previous periods of economic readjustment." The Board has eased the condition due to lowering prices in such manner as to lessen the shock to all growers, he says, and they owe the government a debt of gratitude.

ROWENA RIDES THE RUMBLE

COPYRIGHT 1031 BY THE AUTHOR

by ESTHEL HUESTON

THIRD INSTALMENT

Rackruff Motors hire Rowena to accompany Peter on a nation-wide tour in their roadster as an advertising stunt. At the last minute Little Bobby is engaged to act as chaperon.

A few miles out Bobby becomes tearful at being parted from her sweetheart and Rowena insists on taking her place in the rumble so that she can ride with Peter and have him to talk to about Carter. Rowena gets Peter to consent to divide the expense money each week as soon as it arrives, and astonishes Peter by eating too economically.

To his intense amazement Rowena flushed hotly and bit her lip in some confusion, and most surprising of all, said nothing. Already Peter found it amazing when Rowena had nothing to say.

Certainly she had plenty to say at Niagara Falls when Peter prepared to do his picture of the Rackruff roadster, with her at the wheel, both showing faintly under a fine mist of falling water. When it came to doing pictures, Peter was unbearable. Carter himself could not have been more hatefully dictatorial. He told her what to wear, how to sit, how to rouge her lips. He told her how to hold the wheel, which way to turn her head, just where to fluff her hair and where to draw it back.

"Oh, Peter," protested Rowena faintly. "Please don't do my profile. I'm terrible that way. My face is too thin for a side view."

"Oh, I'll fill it in for you," said Peter comfortably. "It shows up better in the car."

"Oh, the car, the car," muttered Rowena crossly. "It's all you think of."

"It's all I'm paid to advertise," said Peter cheerfully.

When he had finished the picture Rowena wrote a brief adjectivorous story to go with it, and both were dispatched to Rackruff headquarters for immediate release. In addition to the motor story she wrote a short skit every day for use in the newspapers of different cities as they passed through.

At Rackruff headquarters in Chicago they received their first mail from home. There was one fat letter for Rowena, addressed in a big boyish scrawling hand. And there was one for Peter from the company with instructions for the tour and a check for the following week's expenses.

Bobby was thrilled with a huge package of telegrams, twenty in all, and every one from Carter. It seemed that every one of Carter's finer feelings was highly outraged, for each of the twenty telegrams ended with a stern command for her to come home at once.

Even in his wildest nightmares, he said in the telegrams, he had never conceived of a horror equal to that of seeing her much-loved features on public posters and monstrous billboards on every conspicuous corner in town, advertising a cheap new roadster.

Bobby's first intention was to ignore each and every one of these telegraphic outbursts, but by mid-afternoon she had relented so far as to send him a five-cent post-card picture of Lake Michigan. At supper-time she sent a telegram saying they had arrived safely and were leaving early the next morning; and then kept Rowena awake until three o'clock in the morning with the scratch of her pen as she wrote him a detailed account of everything that had happened so far.

After Rowena had read her single fat letter and smiled over it, and frowned over it, she went to her pocketbook and counted her money, down even to nickels and dimes. Then she called Peter's room on the telephone and asked if he would please give her her share of next week's expense money right away.

"Of course," replied Peter. "If you need more I can let you have it. —Don't ever run short of money, Rowena, we can always squeeze out a little extra some way."

"Thanks a lot, Peter," said Rowena gratefully. "I think I can manage after this. But you're sweet to make the offer."

Even Rowena was amazed at the number of things about which Peter had his own ideas, all bad ones. The roads provided an unfailing source of dissension. Their route was clear and definite. From Chicago they were to go south to St. Louis, from St. Louis to Kansas City, from Kansas City to Denver. Nothing could be plainer. Between these cities stretched a broad highway, heavily traveled, expensively paved. The car was supplied with the best of motor maps, and the roads were clearly marked at every turning. Rowena —sitting in the snug shade of the stout umbrella she had bought, was comfortably satisfied to travel swiftly, steadily along the main highways from one objective point to another.

But Peter was all for short-cuts across country, and for all his deceptive air of extreme amiability, was strongly entrenched in his personal preferences. At every town—although not, as Rowena disagreeably claimed, at every telegraph pole—he made hopeful inquiries for short-cuts —for side-roads—for country lanes away from the traveled thoroughfares.

Bobby, as became a professional chaperon, was non-committally neutral. But so far from appreciating her disinterested amiability, it seemed more irritating to the others than the outspoken opposition they met in each other. And often they turned upon her sharply as if she were to blame for the entire argument.

It was in an exquisite wooded dell in southern Illinois that Rowena had her revenge. They had stopped at a quaint roadside log cabin for luncheon, and Peter, gazing pensively through a wide-open window, decided to do a picture on that very spot. Rowena had spent the morning in the rumble seat inditing swift notes on mid-western motoring and was anxious to transcribe them to the typewriter before her memoranda froze on her. So she asked Peter, very politely, if he would please do the picture of the roadster and the wooded dell first, while she was putting her notes into permanent form, and then paint her in behind the wheel later on in the afternoon when the rest of the picture was done. Peter was perfectly willing, even eager, to lay over for an extra day, thus to allow time for her work as well as his, but he said a picture never turned out as well when a lady, or a house, or even a dog, was added to a finished product. Said it always stuck out like a sore thumb and never looked just right.

Rowena put up a good argument—Rowena always put up a good argument — Rowena lost her temper — she usually lost her temper—and the delicious log cabin waffles and honey were ruined.

When, very sulkily, but prepared to pose, she flounced down where Peter had parked the car beside a shadowy pool and was setting up his easel, he said he thought better of it and would not use her in that picture—said Bobby was willing to substitute and the change would be a good thing all round. Peter was quite pleasant about it, really thought he was doing her a favor, but Rowena, from being merely sulky, was suddenly furious. She said she had been hired for no other purpose than to serve as a dumb model for his art and that she would jeopardize her contract by accepting this substitute. But Peter insisted that Messrs. Rack and Ruff had left everything about the pictures to his own exclusive judgment, and this was his judgment.

"Bobby is putting on her little red sports suit," he said, "and the costume will show up nicely in this green dell."

"I know Bobby's clothes are much better than mine," said Rowena stiffly. "I know my things are very shabby and threadbare, but it seems scarcely necessary to throw it up to me."

"That is very unfair of you, Rowena," said Peter gravely. "You are very beautiful in everything you put on, and you know it. I couldn't speak unfavorably of your appearance if I wanted to."

Rowena, without another word, plumped herself down behind the wheel with a set chin, a stern glint in green eyes, and a death grip of her slim hands on the wheel. Peter walked slowly up to her and looked her steadily in the face.

"Then if you will have the truth, Rowena," he said gently, "I would see you hanged before I would try to paint you in this lovely spot. I am so disgusted with the way you act sometimes that I would probably paint you with horns and a tail, which, between you and me, I often suspect you have concealed about you. If I painted you the way you look to me right now they'd never sell another Rackruff short of Gehenna."

Rowena's lovely red lips parted, then closed with a sudden click. Her eyes grew so wide, and turned so deep a hazel that Peter marveled he had ever thought them green.

She got out of the car and went up to the log cabin where she met Bobby coming out of the ladies' dressing-room, all dimpling smiles in the pleasant prospect of posing.

"Peter is terribly tired and cross to-day, poor dear," said Rowena smoothly. "Try to cheer him up, won't you, darling? He's very blue. Tell him about Carter."

"I will," said Bobby sweetly. "I'll tell him about the time he proposed to me. It was terribly thrilling. We were out in a canoe——"

"Peter's waiting," interrupted Rowena quickly. "Yes, tell him about that. Poor dear! He'll be so interested."

A little later, her portable typewriter in her hand, she passed that way to seek a secluded spot in the woods for her own work. Bobby, dimpling and delighted, sat low behind the wheel. Peter, looking just a bit grim, moved restlessly from one foot to the other before his canvas. Rowena's eyes showed cloudy flame in blue when she went by.

"And he forgot we were in a canoe way out in the middle of a deep river. He dropped the paddle overboard and bounded down on the cushions beside me. 'Darling,' he said, 'you do love me, don't you?' And splash! Over we went, canoe, cushions, luncheon and all! But a little thing like being upset in a cold river didn't bother Carter. He went right on kissing me and said over and over, 'Darling, you do love me—you do love me,' and it wasn't until I promised to marry him that he swam off after the canoe and——"

"The poor fishes lived happy for ever after," said Rowena softly.

There were five telegrams for Bobby in St. Louis and, curiously enough, five for Peter also. Rowena, he noticed, had another fat letter addressed in the boyish scrawl; and watching with some curiosity as she read it, he saw that while her brows frowned over it ever so slightly, her eyes smiled to their softest hazel. Immediately she finished reading, she counted the bills in her purse and asked the way to the telegraph office.

"Oh, listen to this!" chortled Bobby ecstatically. "Darlings, he's wild! He'll never forgive me, never. He threatens to send the police after me unless I come right straight home. He calls me a little devil in plain English by Western Union."

"Oh, Bobby," begged Rowena, "please spare us until we get a little of the well-known fine, black, sandy loam of the Middle West out of our ears."

When they stepped into the elevator, Bobby stumbling blindly as she continued to devour the passionate phrases with her avidly shining eyes, Peter motioned Rowena back.

"I want to speak to you just a minute—about business—if you'll excuse us, Bobby."

Rowena turned back at once and he handed her the five telegrams without a word. They were all from Messrs. Rack and Ruff, saying Rackruff Motors, Inc., was in a state of persistent persecution at the hands of a red-haired chemical engineer who had threatened to sue the company, to burn down the factory, and to beat up every member of the firm.

"What the deuce do you suppose it's all about?" wondered Peter.

"Oh, it must be Carter," said Rowena brightly. "He's mad at Bobby."

So they went up to have it out with her at once. They told her she must quit tormenting him, and write him all the details of their trip, how she came to be a member of the party in the first place, and to send him a copy of their complete itinerary. Especially she must call him peremptorily off Messrs. Rack and Ruff, who were likely to become annoyed at such persecution and cancel the trip.

Bobby finally agreed not to tantalize him further and promised to write him a complete account of the adventure.

Randolph Coon Killed by Air Tank Explosion Last Saturday

Freeman Young Man Met Terrible Death When Improvised Spraying Outfit Blew Up — Wilbor Bullock slightly Injured—Two were preparing to Paint the Latter's Garage at Van Vleets When Accident Occurred.

Randolph Coon of Freeman, was almost instantly killed Saturday afternoon when a compressed air tank exploded. Wilbur Bullock, who was working with Mr. Coon at the time, was also injured by flying fragments of the exploded tank, but his injuries were confined to cuts and bruises.

The two men were engaged in painting Mr. Bullock's garage at Van Vleets, when the accident occurred. A spray painting outfit was being used. For some reason the pressure indicator had been removed from the tank, the operators trusting to the use of the machine keeping the pressure in the tank from building up too high. The gasoline engine used with the rig had been giving a little trouble, and the operators stopped painting while they adjusted it, meanwhile the air pump kept building up pressure.

More time than the men realized slipped by as they adjusted the engine and the tank which became inflated beyond the pressure strength suddenly exploded with a roar. Mr. Coon was directly in line with some of the flying pieces of metal, the head of the compressor striking him in the right side, crushing in the ribs and puncturing his right lung. He lived between thirty and forty-five minutes after the accident, being conscious part of the time and aware of his doom. Dr. J. M. Crane was summoned, but aside from alleviating the excruciating pain slightly, was unable to render any aid to the stricken young man.

He was born in Freeman March 20, 1907, the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Coon. After completing his early education in the Freeman school, he attended Addison High School. June 18, 1927, he was married to Alma Smith, daughter of Mrs. John Smith McUmber, who survives him. He followed the occupation of truck driver and painter.

Besides his wife, Mr. Coon left his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Coon and the following sisters and brothers: Mrs. Howard Bates of South Addison, Mrs. Eunice Boylan of Painted Post, Mrs. Mildred Fisher of Corning, Howard Coon of Elmira and Porter Coon of the United States Navy.

The funeral was held from the home of his father Tuesday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock, the Rev. J. V. Axtell, pastor of the Addison Presbyterian Church officiating. Interment was in the Addison Rural Cemetery. The bearers were: Wilbor Bullock, Clyde Rogers, Raymond Dann, Robert Cain, Richard Aldrich and Franklyn Ripley. Those from out-of-town attending the funeral were: Mr. and Mrs. Hobart Coon and family and Mr. and Mrs. Victor Wilcox of Elmira, Mr. and Mrs. John McUmber and family of Bradford, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Haynes of Albion, Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Albee of Galeton, Mr. and Mrs. Vell Fisher of Corning and Mrs. Eunice Boylan of Geneseo.

BEATRICE LILLIE'S CAREER MARKED WITH SUCCESS

"Are You There?" which comes to the Star Theatre, Friday and Saturday presents Miss Beatrice Lillie in the role of a lady detective, almost as famous as Sherlock Holmes. She becomes entangled with a gang of international crooks who are preying upon British aristocracy.

Miss Lillie is not a conventional detective, by any means, and her sleuthing methods form the basis for a hilarious comedy.

Miss Lillie has ample opportunity to display her singing ability in this production. Grace Henry and Morris Hamilton, who wrote the score for "The Little Show" and several of Earl Carroll's "Vanities", provided the tunes and the clever lyrics.

An all star cast supports Miss Lillie and includes John Garrick, Olga Bachlanova, Lloyd Hamilton, George Grossmith, Jullian Sand, Gustav von Seyffertitz, among others.

COUDERSPORT WAS RATHER EASY HERE

County Seaters from Potter County Started Strong, But Failed to Hold Pace.

Addison took Coudersport into camp at Tuscarora Field Sunday by the score of 8 to 3. Coudersport started off strong, scoring two runs on the strength of a couple of hits and some loose playing, but after that they were helpless before Ripley's fine pitching and had to be satisfied with a single hit for the rest of the game. Ripley also struck out seven men, besides limiting Coudersport to the aforesaid three singles. Addison started slow but finished fast. The Hickey brothers furnished the fielding features, Phil making two fine running catches, while Charles made a couple of great stops and throws. Jawn Grange was again the long distance clubber with a double and tripple to his credit. Darrin was the busy boy for Coudersport at third base and he played well. Addison had their full strength on the lot and in such cases the opposition had better beware, which was the case Sunday.

With two out Carpenter singled in the first, O'Neil walked and Black singled, which with some few wild throws netted Coudersport two runs. This ended their attack for the day. Timpano's wide curve held Addison for the first, but LaChance and Phil Hickey got together for a run in the second. The fourth saw big doings, Charles Hickey started it with a hit and for a few minutes the air was too full of bunts for Timpano. Then D. Grange and Ripley changed the order of the day with timely safe drives. The whole cluster netted Addison four runs and the game was all over, but the shouting. John Grange started the sixth with a triple, the following doings sent three more runs over for the locals.

Next Sunday Addison goes over to Westfield for a battle with the tanners.

PULITZER PRIZE PLAY ACTRESS IN RADIO DRAMA

Alma Kruger, who played a leading role in ""Alison's House," this year's Pulitzer Prize winner, will have the leading role in a radio drama, when the Soconyland Players present "Cinnamon Roses," over Station WGY at 7:30 P. M., July 21.

Hardly a single New England village has failed to witness the tragedy that comes with a Sheriff's sale of someone's old home, to satisfy the claims of the mortgage holders. In "Cinnamon Roses," a Mary E. Wilkins Freeman story first published by Harper and Brothers, Elsie Mills, about to be ousted from her family home by the law, hysterically defends the place against the purchaser. In her front yard great clusters of wild cinnamon roses grow, the only mementoes of her much loved and departed sister. There comes a purchaser whom Elsie thinks once was refused matrimony by this same sister. When Elsie learns that he has bought the place she refuses his offer to her that she continue to live in it. And then she learns that he plans to destroy the cinnamon rose bushes.

Elsie's determination that her sister's flowers shall not be destroyed, her discovery of the real intentions of the purchaser and her final happiness after weeks of near hysteria offer moments for intense radio drama.

COLLEGES FURNISH NEWS FOR PAPERS

Timely Information Issued for Farmers and Homemakers Through Press of the State

During the month of June the New York state colleges of agriculture and home economics at Ithaca sent to the newspapers of the state 114 news items, designed to acquaint the people with the latest facts about farming and homemaking. Such items have formed the basis of many of the departments devoted to these subjects in a large number of New York papers.

Of these items, 61 went to daily papers; 35 to weeklies; and 18 to the farm bureau monthly papers published by the county agricultural agents. These figures represent an average of about 2½ items for each publication date for dailies; and 7¾ for each publication date of the weekly papers, and include the sets of short paragraphs sent to both dailies and weeklies.

In the preceding month, May, 128 items were sent to the press; a total of 802 items were issued during the first half of the present calendar year, since January 1.

Rounder—I sure need advice, old man. I'm in love with a Chicago gangster's wife. What would you recommend?

Bounder—Well, the Prudential or the Postal are both good companies.

Plenty of Water Keeps Baby Cool

Omit Soap and Use Soda or Cooked Starch When Child Has Prickly Heat

Plenty of water inside and out makes hot weather less uncomfortable for babies as well as for their elders. Supplemented by common sense it should make the small child perfectly happy in summer, suggests the New York state college of home economics.

The baby should be given boiled water several times a day between feedings. He gets just as thirsty as his parents who want much more water in hot weatther than when it is cool. Besiles cooling in itself, it helps to keep the bowels open and to make up for the loss of moisture through the skin which is increased when the weather is warm. If the child is too young to take water from a cup it may be given from a bottle.

In addition to his regular bath, which may be given somewhat cooler than usual, it helps to sponge the baby off once or twice a day. If this is done before bedtime, it will make his sleeping easier. He should be handled as little as possible both at his bath and at other times, and should not be held in anyone's lap or carried about in their arms.

Prickly heat may be relieved by adding two tablespoons of soda or a cup of cooked laundry starch to each gallon of water used for the baby's regular bath. Soap shou'd be omitted until the prickly heat has disappeared, and the baby's skin should be dusted with a mild, unscented powder after he is dried.

PROVES ACCURACY OF NEW TEST

Tests on Molly, a pure-bred Guernsey cow in Orange county, have shown that a dairyman may take milk samples and weights for himself, and get accurate tests in the new dairy record clubs. Ray Bender, assistant county agent in Orange county, reports that one herd in the dairy record club, Molly gave 9,431 pounds of milk and 514.78 pounls of fat according to the official test; and 9,389 pounds of milk with 518.6 pounds oof fat in the dairy record club tests. The difference of 42 pounds of milk and 3.82 pounds of fat is too small to attempt to explain, according to the dairyman; but Mr. Bender says the difference may be because the official test was made early in the month and the record club test the last of each month.

WATERMELON MEMORIES

When the meat of the watermelon is disposed of in the way usual in large families, do not throw out the rind because it appears for the moment inedible. Make watermelon pickles of it for use next winter when the rest of the melon has long been forgotten.

Clean the rind; then cut it up in small pieces and soak it over night in a salt solution of a quarter cup of salt to a quart of water. Drain off the brine the next morning and cook the rind in clear water until it is tender.

For every two pounds of rind, weighed before soaking, prepare a pickling solution of two pounds of sugar, a pint of vinegar, a pint of water, one lemon sliced thin, one tablespoon of cinnamon, and a teaspoon each of cloves and allspice. Add the rind to this mixture and boil it rapidly until it is clear. Seal the pickles in sterilized hot jars and stow them away to be produced on festive occasions during the fall and winter.

ENTICE THE MICE

Fruit growers can protect their trees from girdling in summer just as effectively as in winter, but winter protection may still be necessary, according to Professor G. W. Peck of the New York state college of agriculture. Sheets of roofing paper, laid on the ground, offer protection to mice and attract them. In a few weeks, many nests and runways will be found under the papers. Poisoned grain placed under the protectors helps to reduce the damage from girdling. Galvanized wire cloth, quarter inch mesh wrapped about tree trunks, is also effective in preventing damage.

HOME BUREAU

NEW OFFICERS TAKING CHARGE

Local Home Bureau units throughout the county are meeting now to plan the programs for the coming year. Those meetings are in charge of the new chairmen.

These new chairmen as record d at the county Home Bureau Office are: Addison, Mrs. Walter Perkins; Avoca, Mrs. F. W. Ives; Bennett's Creek, Mrs. Thomas Mullin; Borden, Mrs. John Gardner; Brasted, Mrs. A. J. Lyke; Canisteo Valley, Mrs. Willis Schenck; Campbell, Mrs. C. M. Lovell; Caton, Mrs. Olin Harrison; Cohocton, Mrs. Earl Coye; Gibson, Mrs. Floyd Phenes; Greenwood, Mrs. A. H. Dennis; Hammondsport, Mrs. L. J. Mahson; Hedgesville, Mrs. William Preece; Howard, Mrs. Bert Bennett; Maple City, Mrs. LeRoy Smith; Painted Post, Mrs. Dwight Wood; Pleasant Valley, Mrs. U. S. Arland; Savona, Mrs. Leon Fenton; Troupsburg, Mrs. Oscar Dyer; Wayland, Mrs. R. W. Stein; West Greenwood, Mrs. Floyd Pease; West Union, Mrs. Charles Graves. Units not listed have not reported the result of the spring election.

Local units have the privilege of requesting copies of their local programs so that each member may know just what each meeting wil be devoted to. These programs are issued in a heavy cover containing a picture of the College of Home Economics at Ithaca, the headquarters for extension work in the state, and the Home Bureau Creed written by Dr. Ruby Green Smith. The inner sheet of information contains not only the list of local unit meetings but also the dates for county and district meetings, conferences, training schools, etc.

MEMBERSHIP DRIVE BEGINS SOON

The Executive Committee of the Steuben County Home Bureau has made plans for its membership contest this year. It begins at a slightly earlier date than usual since project work is beginning in August rather than September this year. The committee felt that new members should have an opportunity to join in time to begin at the very beginning so the campaign will start on August 15 and close September 1.

Mrs. LeRoy Smith, County Vice-Chairman, will be in charge of the campaign and the vice-chairmen and a local membership committee will take charge in each organized unit.

Special prizes are being awarded by the county committee as follows: First prize for highest percentage of renewals $5.50, second prize, $2.50. First prize for highest percentage of new members, $5.00, second prize, $2.50.

Members of local units are aksed to help the local committee by renewing prompty and aiding in procuring new members.

GREEN SHELL BEANS

The Cranberry bean with crimson stripe,
I boil it green, I bake it ripe.

Any of our common beans when approaching full seed size, but not and all, I suppose, are somewhat so used. Nevertheless, even from the Indian days, there have been spcialized types for this purpose. My friend, Mr. Peter Doctor of the Senecas, has given me two varities—one pole and the other bush, long grown by his people. The bush bean seems identical, red stripes and all, with our dwarf Horticultural or Cranberry. The pole type is much like our pole Horticultural. The Senecas call both types "haryok." The Horticulturals, pole and dwarf, are our most popular varieties for green shell use.

Another bean of a different species is the White Runner, a good green shell bean rather common in New York state. It is a pole bean and is often called a lima though it really is not. Most of the state is too far north for pole limas. Bush limas may be grown in most sections. Fordhook bush lima is good. Those too far north or too high up in the air for that variety may try the Henderson bush lima with better hope. It is small seeded but good.

DOMESTIC BUYING OF CARS EXCEEDS 1930

Production of Chevrolet cars and trucks in June totaled 84,597 units as against 78,472 in the same month of 1930, W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager announced today.

The June figure brought the output of the company for the first six months of the year to 522,232 units, Mr. Knudsen said.

Production during June compares with 113,852 cars and trucks built in May, which was the highest month's output since July, 1929. The decline in production from May to June this year, however, was 6,000 units less than during the corresponding period last year, indicating a seasonal decline rather than the abrupt drop experienced last June, when the slump in general business first was felt by Chevrolet, Mr. Knudsen said.

Of the volume during the month just ended, 78,734 units were built for the domestic market as against 70,160 a year ago, a fact which Mr. Knudsen interprets as further evidence of improvement in the United States in retail buying over a year ago, at least as far as Chevrolet is curve intersecting last year's during the May-June period, sales in June and every remaining month this year are expected to exceed the corresponding months of last year, Mr. Knudsen stated.

The margin of difference by which in 1930 exceeded that of 1931 has gradually narrowed month by month this year, and with the output

RADIO AND HEALTH

Radio, the crowning achievement of its time, and one of our greatest blessings, may be degraded to a mere matter of dollars and cents, when mankind descends wholly to that level. Did you ever think that your receiving set may lead you headlong into the open arms of the nostrum-vender and quack, solely in the interest of his pocketbook? That you are made poorer and he the richer by your own soft gullibility?

It gives me a first-rate case of nausea to hear the blatant yawp of some hired man for a quack concern, pleading with me and you to go to the drug store, first thing in the morning and BUY a bottle of germ-killer that knocks 'em in a specified number of seconds!

These fellows that never crossed the threshold of a pathological laboratory in their lives, presume to tell me about "bacterit." They infer off-hand that you and I have a mouthful, neckful, stomachful of potent germs, deadly in character, if not killed off at once by the great bottled savior of mind and body; they juggle handily with laboratory terms, as though they had been raised on test tubes and retorts and chemical reactions; all to get YOU and ME to BUY their gully wash and soak it into our systems.

And do we buy it? We certainly do; we buy stuff of which we know absolutely nothing, at the solicitation of an itinerant who is solely interested in the sum he can extract from your purse, and who knows and cares nothing about the stuff he is paid to peddle. He gets his pabulum into the family, into your children, into you and your wife—and if you all use it four or six times a day, all the better—for the nostrum-vendor. For, nine out of ten, you could use hot water and boracic acid with better results at one-twentieth the cost.

A good rule for the rural radio-fan is, to believe nothing he hears from a paid propagandist. He has an ax to grind, and you, dear reader, have been picked out to turn the grindstone. Summon your horse sense; that's my advice.

Potato Growers Plan Field Day

Select George W. Lamb Farm at Hubbardsville for Summer Meeting—Expect Record Attend nce

New York state potato growers will see most of the stages of potato growing at the Empire State potato club field day July 29, on the George W. Lamb farm at Hubbardsville, Madison County. One field is to be plowed, fitted, and planted, another weeded and cultivated, another sprayed and dusted and in the fourth field a digger will be operating.

Chester Gray, Washing on representative of the American farm bureau federation, and Oscar J. Alberding, premier potato grower in 1930, speak on the noon program at 1 o'clock. Following the demonstrations, K. C. Livermore of Honeoye Falls discusses plowing and fitting; G. W. Lamb, cultivating and planting; Daniel Dean of Nichols, spraying and dusting; and Verne Beverly, county agent of Aroostock county, Maine, tells how Aroostock growers avoid digger damage.

The Lamb farm is located near the Cherry Valley Turnpikke where plans are being made for an even larger attendance than at last year's field day at Honeoye Falls. The crowd of 3,500 persons last year made the largest potato meeting ever held in the United States, according to specialists at the college of agriculture.
